Texarkana Murder Case Is Cleared Up

Two of Three Youths Suspected Make Confessions to Officers

TEXARKANA.—Warrants charging first degree murder were issued Tuesday afternoon against Albert Boulton, Grady Parker and George Lawson, all Texarkana youths, in connection with the slaying of G. Z. Reynolds, 53-year-old filling station manager who was shot to death at 1 a. m. Sunday while on duty at the Young Bros. filling station on East Ninth street. All three have been in jail since Monday.

The warrants were issued after officers reported that a signed confession had been made by Boulton at 1 a. m. Tuesday in which he admitted he fired the shot that killed Reynolds and implicated Lawson and Parker. He said the trio planned late Saturday to rob the Young filling station, but did not want to kill anybody. During the hold-up he became excited and fired a shot which struck Reynolds in the side, causing death in a few minutes. He declared also that two other young men, Archie Parker and Dick Harless, who were in jail also as suspects, were not connected with the slaying and they were released.

The confession came after several hours of continuous grilling. Later Tuesday Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Barney announced that Grady Parker also had made a complete confession, corroborating that of Boulton on all material points, and that Lawson had "partly confessed." Boulton, who gave his age as 18, said neither before nor at the time of the hold-up had the thought of being detected and arrested occurred to him. Grady Parker, who called the police and ambulance after the slaying, and told them he was a visitor in the office of the station at the time of the slaying, with his parents in the same family.

Generally "Quiet" Bachelor or Then Ends Own Life With Bullet

LANSING, Mich.—(P)—Becoming suddenly insane, a man described by acquaintances as usually "quiet, courteous and intelligent," shot up the Capital National bank Tuesday afternoon, wounding five persons. And, as a crowd in the bank rushed for the exit, he reloaded his pistol, placed it in his mouth and ended his life.

The man, D. J. Mead, 52, bachelor, and member of a one-time wealthy Lansing family, had been in the bank for about 10 minutes before he drew his pistol and opened fire. "This town has given me a dirty deal," he shouted. "Where's the big shot?"

Nichols, a depositor, shot through the neck, and Albert Elssner, executive vice president of the bank, shot through the right shoulder and right side. ## Political Thrust at Power Plant Stirs Charity Body

Resolution by Pat Casey Demanding Free Service, Withdrawn

ASKS FREE SERVICE

Municipal Plant's Policies Defended by Rev. J. L. Cannon

The appearance of Pat Casey, a political candidate, with a resolution that he wished to be endorsed, stirred up a short debate at a membership meeting of the Hempstead county Red Cross and Associated Charities at Hope city hall Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Casey, a candidate for city attorney, would have had the meeting go on record as recommending certain executive orders to the management of the municipal water and light plant.

Chairman D. B. Thompson challenged the propriety of the action in a meeting called for the purpose of studying Hope's charity needs, and Mr. Casey consented to withdraw his resolution. Mr. Thompson then appointed a committee of three, Mr. Casey, Dr. J. L. Cannon and W. A. Lewis, to study the matters covered by Mr. Casey's proposal.

His proposed resolution read in part as follows: "As a partial temporary immediate relief I would suggest that the city council of Hope authorize and instruct the superintendent of the Hope municipal water and light plant to cancel all past indebtedness of patrons who are in arrears for water and light service due to and who are unemployed, partly unemployed and without means of support and to issue no further notice to such patrons that their water and light service will be discontinued by the city unless their water and light bills are paid."

The municipal plant toward citizens recognized to be in hard circumstances, was explained by other speakers; and Chairman Thompson gave it as his opinion that state law prohibited a public utility plant from performing actual free service, although it is permissible to charge off accounts for due cause.

Minister Defends Plant Dr. Cannon, pastor of First Methodist church, entered the debate at an early stage, concluding with this statement: "And while I am on my feet I want to express my high appreciation of the power and light plant of Hope. A year ago, it was the people out in the country who were in distress. And when this fact became known in Hope, your power and light plant began to buy wood for fueling their furnaces, of those people who had wood to sell. They judiciously expended thousands of dollars for this wood and piled it up on their yards until they had a stack of fuel that was big enough to burn up New York. The money expended for this wood enabled many unfortunate people, white and colored, to get through the winter."

"But this is not all. I have lived here more than a year, and during all this time, the lights have never been off in my house for a period of time longer than five minutes. Only once have we been without lights in the house for so long a time at that. If the water has even been out of the house, it was so manipulated as to time, that we never found it out."

"Not only is this true, gentlemen, but we have been paying the smallest water and light bills we have ever paid since we have been in the ministry. They are as nothing compared to what we have paid to these multi-millionaire corporations which handle such business in other towns where we have lived."

John Fitzsimmons was chosen permanent secretary of the charities organization.

Rescue Parties Are Unable to Locate Missing Naval Boat

Believed Lying Seventeen Fathoms Deep in English Channel

HOPE FOR RESCUE

Boat Is Equipped With Latest Life-Saving Devices

PORTLAND, Eng.—(P)—Rescue parties of the British navy, battling treacherous tides Wednesday, striving to save the lives of 54 men in the submarine M-2, believed to be lying on its side seventeen fathoms deep in Man's Bay, on the floor of the English channel.

The submarine was not located Tuesday afternoon.

As soon as rumors spread throughout the naval port at Portsmouth that "something had happened" to the submarine, movie theaters interrupted their programs while orders were sent to sailors in the houses calling to them to rejoin their ships.

Wives, mothers and sweethearts of the submarine crew, the majority of whom came from Portsmouth, on the land, hoped the vessel might be raised, a mechanical device, and would emerge unscathed. But the strain began to show on them as the hours went by.

One official at headquarters of the commander-in-chief of Portsmouth said the M-2 was engaged in maneuvers, when she disappeared. The sea was calm, but there was a fog.

The M-2 is equipped with the latest life-saving devices, he said. Admiralty quarters in London said the submarine was believed to be lying on its side.

While admiralty officials gave no reason to abandon hope, they said it would be idle to suggest there were not grounds for the gravest misgivings.

The latest navy list gave Lieutenant Commander J. D. de M. Leathley, commander of the M-2, whose home port is Portsmouth.

An official at headquarters of the naval commander-in-chief at Portsmouth, whose command also embraces Portland, said the M-2 was exercising alone at Portland.

"The last message we received from her was at 10:01 a. m.," he said, "and signified that she was about to commence exercises. These would involve diving, but nothing out of the routine of exercises."

Floods Begin Search "When she did not return at the proper time, the destroyers, Salmon Thruster, Torrid and Rowena, and two submarines, went out to search for her. They are still out."

"The sea is quite calm, but there is a certain amount of fog."

"A submarine of the M-2 type could remain under water for 48 hours. She is equipped with the latest lifesaving devices."

Slayer of Wife Refuses to Eat

Guy Reynolds, in Hot Springs Jail, Also Declines to Drink Water

HOT SPRINGS.—Guy Reynolds, confessed wife slayer who Monday surprised court officials by declaring the spirit of his dead wife was haunting him, has gone on a hunger strike, it became known Tuesday night. Since Monday morning Reynolds has not tasted food or water, jail officials said.

Circuit Judge Earl Witt, who appointed three physicians to make an examination of Reynolds, and who endeavored to examine him immediately after his demonstration in court, reported Tuesday they were unable to go thoroughly into Reynolds' case because of the man's conduct.

When Reynolds was not announcing his wife was haunting him, he kept rolling his head from side to side and then lay as if in a stupor. The physicians reported to Judge Witt that they had administered an opiate to Reynolds and would make another attempt to determine whether the man has gone insane or if he is feigning insanity.

Reynolds first manifested unusual symptoms Saturday when he startled other prisoners in the same cell by yelling to them not to admit the woman he confessed he killed, declaring she was trying to get into his cell.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE BY KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN and ORVILLE FENWICK have for years supported themselves as a young couple. ANN, FRANCES, and their grandparents, known as "ROSS A LIE" and "GRAND" because of this financial responsibility, Ann, who is 25, is unable to marry Phil, ECROYD, young lawyer to whom she has been engaged for eight years. Cecily, 22, loves HARRY McKIDEL, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to accept his wedding ring for the same reason.

Mary-Frances, 16, had still in school, believes herself in love with EARL DEARMOUNT, vaudeville actor whom she has met without the knowledge of her sisters. It urges her to leave home and become his stage partner.

Ann and Phil quarrel when she hears LETTY KING, who works in Phil's office building, address him with endearments. Ann tries to forget Phil by going about with KENNETH SMITH, rich and attractive.

Mary-Frances agrees to go away with De Armount. The same day Cecily quarrels with her grandfather and drives away with Harry in his car.

Kenneth Smith asks Ann to marry him and she refuses. She comes home to find a note saying her grandparents have gone to meet the day with friends. At this Cecily arrives with news that she and Harry are to be married the next evening.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIII

MRS. HILL was sitting in a wicker chair on the front porch reading the evening paper. Ermintrude was on the steps with a book in her lap. Mr. Hill and Uncle Chaney were in the yard bending over the lawn mower, which was turned upside down between them. The four persons, and the green lawn, and the white house, and the pink rose hedge composed neatly into an attractive picture of suburban home life. Nothing seemed lacking.

Mrs. Hill looked over the edge of her paper, and smiled and stood, and held out her hand, and said, "Good evening, Miss Fenwick. I'm so glad to see you. Take this chair, won't you? Honey, bring out another chair for mother."

"No, thank you," Ann said. "I can't stay. I'm in a hurry, rather. I came for Mary-Frances."

"Mary-Frances?" Mrs. Hill questioned, more as if she had never heard the name before than as if Ann had said she had come for Bonnie Prince Charlie.

"Yes, I want her to come home with me."

"But, Miss Fenwick, Mary-Frances isn't here. She hasn't been here since this afternoon."

"Oh," said Ann faintly, not as an exclamation. "But—she said she was coming here. She brought Cecily's bag. She—she must be here. I mean—but, then, where in the world is she?"

"Why, I don't know, I'm sure. We asked her to stay for dinner, and she said she couldn't. That your grandfather was ill and that she was needed at home."

"Well, but—she's too big to get lost. Ermintrude, do you know where Mary-Frances is?"

Ermintrude slumped her back against her stomach clock, looked at the same time to be squinting away from a small and to be squinting, wiggling, as it were, down into herself.

"Stop acting like that, Ermintrude," Mrs. Hill said, "and answer at once. Do you know where Mary-Frances is?"

Ermintrude muttered. Ann leaned close. "She says," she confessed for Mrs. Hill, "that, in a way, she does."

"That's enough of that, now, Ermintrude. You will please answer at once. Where is Mary-Frances?"

Ermintrude moistened her lips. She swallowed. "I—well, I guess I couldn't help it, could I? She stopped."

"Stopped? Stopped?" said Ann, hunting a place for it, seeking a definition, pushing her fingers through her hair.

"E-loped," pronounced Ermintrude distinctly. "E-loped off with a man."

Ann took Ermintrude by the shoulders and shook her, not hard but back and forth. "No, no, no, no. She couldn't. She's a baby. She couldn't. Why do you say such a thing? No, no—"

Mrs. Hill went down the steps and put an arm around Ann. "Don't, dear," she said. "Joe," she called, across the lawn. "Joe—come here. Joe. Come. Come quickly—Joe."

Joe came bounding. He expected to put out the fire, to grab the murderer and robber, and to rescue his wife and his daughter. In 17 years of married life only once before had he heard Trudie's voice go insane.

ON her way home, in Mr. Hill's car, Ann listened to him telling her again that if Mary-Frances and that dirty car were at Blumount there would be no damage done as long as they managed to keep it out of the papers. If her sister Cecily and her friend found the child at Blumount, he did hope they would follow his advice and simply bring her home and let the man go. It would be the only way to avoid publicity, and publicity must be avoided.

She said, "Yes, Mr. Hill. Barry and Cecily thought so, too," and listened to what Ermintrude had said a few minutes before.

"No, they weren't going to get married for a while. He couldn't, on account of his father's will," she don't know. Several months she said. They were just going on their honeymoon and then on the stage. I guess it will be all right. Mary-Frances really loved him, mother. She really loved him, deeply and truly."

"Be still with that, Ermintrude, will you? Answer daddy, now. Is that all you know about where they were going? Positively everything? Stop crying and answer me. Blumount tonight? You are sure of that?"

Cecily's voice, struck over the telephone. "Barry's just come. We'll start at once. Four hours' head start. Don't you know?"

For an instant, Barry's voice. "We'll—see them, Ann. Don't ## gling, as it were, down into herself.

worry. We'll tear the place down,

If necessary. Mr. Hill is right about keeping it quiet, though."

"But suppose," Ann said, again, to Mr. Hill, "that they didn't go to Blumount. Suppose he said that just to mislead us?"

"In that case, I suppose we'll have to go to the police. Gosh knows what good they'll do. Perhaps I'll be able to think of someone who has influence enough to keep it out of the papers, if we do have to go to the police."

"Really?—I don't care about the papers. Neither did Cissy, until Barry thought we should. I— I'd much rather call in the police right away."

"MISS FENWICK, we have to care. What can the police do, now? Watch the highways—but they left at 4, and we aren't positive as to the direction. I'll find his garage and discover what make of car he was driving. I'll go to his rooming house—I may be able to pick up some information there, and around the theater. If he's half as big a fool as he looked, he has probably told where he was bound for, eventually. Uncle Chaney seemed to think that the desk in Denver might be a lead. He may get trace of them at the service stations on that highway."

"Then—you don't believe they will be at Blumount?"

"I hope so with all my heart. But, remember this, Miss Fenwick, sooner or later we'll find her. I'm not a rich man, but every cent I can rake up will go into this—if it needs to. Yes, yes, indeed, I am responsible. I am deeply responsible. Trudie and I reared Ermintrude—"

"No, Mr. Hill. For that matter, so have I reared Mary-Frances."

"You are nothing but girls yourselves—busy girls away from home all day. And your grandparents are—well, that is to say, they are very old."

He stopped the car on the driveway in front of the door and said, as Ann stepped out of it, "I'll telephone to you the minute I hear anything at all. Uncle Chaney will phone if he hears anything. Don't break down now. Don't give up hope."

"I wish," said Ann, "that there were something I could do—anything, besides just waiting for telephone calls. Something. Anything."

"Pray, pray hard. And if you have any friends you can trust, absolutely, to keep their mouths shut now and always, phone them and have them go scouting about on the highways or Uncle Chaney is doing. If they stopped for gas—something to eat—anything, we may get a lead. The sooner we get it the better. I'll find out about his car the first thing and let you know. That you can tell your friends that much, at least, along with the description of that dirty car and Mary-Frances. A brown striped suit, remember. A blue coat, and a blue dress with ## smocking."

"Yes, a blue dress. I did the smocking."

Ann went into the house and into the dining room and sat down in a chair, which she had put directly under the telephone, and rubbed her right hand into the damp palm of her left hand, and waited.

THE telephone bell.

"Miss Fenwick? This is Joe Hill speaking. The car is a 1928 sports model Thysler, repainted yellow with green trimmings. No news as yet, as I suppose."

"A 1928 sports model Thysler, repainted yellow with green trimmings. No, not a word. Not a word from anyone."

"Too soon yet to hear, you know. Keep up heart. I'll call you again, later. I'm going to see his landlady now, and to the theater."

Ann dialed a number and asked for Mr. Phillip Ecroyd. Just a moment please. Mr. Ecroyd did not answer.

Ann dialed another number. Mr. Kenneth Smith was not at home.

Ann waited.

The telephone bell.

"Miss Fenwick? This is Ermintrude's mother. I don't want to keep your line busy for more than a moment, but Ermintrude says that he has been begging Mary-Frances to go with him for a month now; and that once he promised to treat her like a 'pal'— Mrs. Hill seemed to spit at the word as she pronounced it—"and, another time, like a brother."

"Oh," said Ann. "Once."

"Yes, I know," said Mrs. Hill. "But—don't—well, remember, we're right with you. We'll do everything, everything in our power. Dear, I can't tell you how sorry— But we'll find her. We will, now. Goodbye."

Ann waited.

The telephone bell.

"Walnut 5345? Oh, Miss Fenwick. This is Hostetter speaking. Chaney Hostetter. Has Joe phoned in yet about the car, what make it was?"

"A 1928 sports model Thysler, repainted yellow with green trimmings."

"Great! Fine! That ought to be easy. Keep up your spirits, little lady. Everything will turn out for the best. Goodbye."

Ann waited.

The telephone bell.

"Hello, Miss Fenwick. This is Joe Hill again. I've caught his landlady at last—she's been out for a walk. She says he did have a desk in his room, and that she heard him say he had to return it to Denver. It was in his room yesterday and gone today. In Denver does seem to be one lead."

"But, Mr. Hill, Blumount is south. If they were going to Denver, then—then Blumount is hopeless."

Girl of 17 Shows Cotton Growers How And Gets Eight Bales on Five Acres

ELIZABETH WEATHERFORD

AUGUSTA, Ga. (NEA)—One of Georgia's champion cotton growers is going to give up farming to become a trained nurse!

After Elizabeth Weatherford, who grew more in 1931 than anyone else in the county and ranked second in the Augusta district finishes high school at Blythe, next spring, she is coming to Augusta to begin training.

If she keeps up her farming record as a nurse, she will be a top-notch-er. At 17 years of age, the brown-eyed miss who can plow as straight a furrow as anyone can pitch hay if necessary, and had rather sew and know about the kitchen making garden products desirable than anything else, has shown the gray-headed veterans what hard work intelligently applied can do. Not only did she win the county prize, but her record is likely to get a state award, her county agent says.

With six-cent cotton discouraging other cotton farmers she made a net profit of $24.25 per acre after deducting every known item, including interest, her own labor cost, hired labor or labor from share croppers, and an extra 10 per cent for overhead.

She raised 4193 pounds of lint cotton on five acres, more than eight bales.

"And I entered the contest just for fun," she beamed as she told of her successful venture into contest farming.

"Harvey won it last year," she said, recalling her brother's triumph the year before in the district contest. "This year he couldn't enter because he got married and moved away, so daddy let me have the field. I guess it was good luck as much as anything else, although I did work pretty hard. In all, I worked 235 hours."

Elizabeth modestly wouldn't say so, but her mother, Mrs. M. A. Weatherford, says the girl did "just about everything about that cotton except plough it all the time."

"She did a little of that, too," said the mother, "although the hands had plenty of time."

In addition to cotton growing, Elizabeth has taken active part in 4-H Club work, having won prizes in sewing and cooking. Before going to school she gets up at 4:30 helps milk, cooks breakfast and aids her mother, who is not in good health, in cleaning up the house, and looks after the poultry.

She is very much of a girl despite the fact that she has excelled at a man's game. Her hair is attractively bobbed. She is slender despite 135 pounds for her five foot stature. Overalls she wears about the place, not because she wants to "play boy" but because "they are much handier than a dress for pottering about a farm."
